

The Dual Strap System

Two worlds on one wrist

The Apple Watch is currently one of the best smartwatches on the market. It comes as no surprise therefore that the watch has also sparked the interest of the more classic watch wearer. Such wearers primarily swear by high-quality mechanical watches, yet are also highly interested in the variety of useful features offered by a smartwatch. Especially for these watch lovers, we have bridged both worlds by designing the Dual Strap System.

Scope of delivery: Case with two shortened strap halves for the Apple Watch, including strap lugs, two shortened strap halves for your SINN watch, a connecting strap, strap replacement tool and spare spring bars.

So far, the pivotal question has always been: Are passionate watch wearers expected to remove their high-quality mechanical timepiece to make room for a smartwatch? Or do they stay true to their conviction by continuing to trust proven, timeless mechanics – and consequently forsake the benefits of a smartwatch? Or perhaps the solution is to wear a watch on each wrist? But just how practical would that be and how long would it take the wearer to get used to such a solution?

Outstanding wearer comfort

There are many everyday instances in which wearing both watches at the same time on the same wrist could come in useful: e.g. on business trips, at conferences, or in meetings. This shows how we have everything to gain by bringing the best of both worlds together. We therefore came up with a typically SINN solution and developed the Dual Strap System, based on the dual buckle principle. In order to assess just how extremely comfortable the Dual Strap System is, we recommend trying it out for yourself.

Always up to date – even without a smartphone

All in all, the Dual Strap System is the perfect solution for both the SINN watch and the Apple Watch, allowing wearers to use both at the same time. On the one hand is the tried-and-trusted mechanical watch with its timeless, classic values, symbolising quality, aesthetics and reliability. This watch is also often the only piece of jewellery male wearers are reluctant to do without.

How the Dual Strap System works

First, two shortened strap halves (each featuring a toothed buckle) are attached to each watch. These strap halves and one of the two toothed buckles are then used to fasten both watches together. Strapped together, the watches can then be placed on the wrist and fastened securely with the other toothed buckle. Attaching the toothed buckles to both ends allows the watches to be centred on the wrist. A separate connecting strap, which is included in the set, ensures a high level of flexibility. This allows the watches to be worn separately, if necessary.

On the other hand is the smartwatch, which boasts a variety of innovative features plus an additional practical benefit, especially in everyday working life: a discreet glance at the wrist is all it takes to check messages, even when the smartphone should really be kept in a bag.

Fasten both watches together using the two shortened strap halves and one of the two toothed buckles. Place the connected watches on your wrist and fasten the strap with the other toothed buckle.

You can also wear the watches separately. Simply use the separate connecting strap provided. Fasten the strap with both toothed buckles.

Technical details

- The Dual Strap System fits SINN watches with a strap lug width of 22 mm and Apple Watches with a case size of 38 mm and 42 mm.
- The original strap lug for the Apple Watch is acquired from authorised retailers and is supplied pre-attached to the appropriate shortened strap halves. Refer to the manufacturer's instructions for assembly.
- When purchasing a SINN watch, the shortened strap halves can be supplied pre-attached to the SINN watch on request.
- We recommend sapphire crystal glass, magnetic field protection and TEGIMENT Technology for your SINN watch.
